

YEAR SIX

Letter of Complaint

In English, we have been learning how to write formal letters of complaint using Harry Potter as a stimulus for our writing. Take a look at some of the magical results!

I am shocked that this was allowed and, although all students organisations were banned shortly after its discovery, the Army still continued.

In addition, Potter also drugged two fellow students using sleep pills, which were planted in some cupcakes, and then before locking them in a cupboard and used a potion (made illegally outside of the potions classroom) to impersonate them. This was all done to interrogate me.

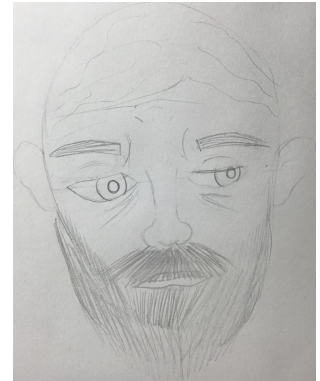

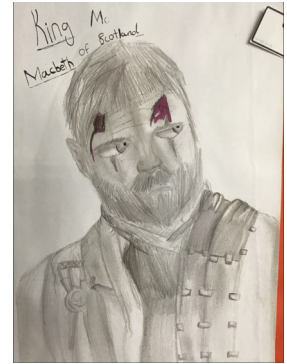

Furthermore, I have received information that Hogwarts school Potions teacher (Severus Snape) was attacked by Potter during our third year. I have spoken to Snape; he gladly recorded the event...

Apparently, what Potter was, strangely, attempting to allow the notorious mass-murderer, Sirius Black, to plead his innocence in the shrieking shack, instead of trying to stun him like Professor Snape, rightfully did. Potter decided to stun Snape instead, launching him across the flimsy building. Luckily, our much-loved Potions teacher landed on an old, rickety bed, preventing serious injury. Even though he may now be considered as the chosen one, this does not give him the right to attack a teacher!

~~Secret~~ This should surely be enough evidence to get Potter expelled!

Finally, I would like to list a terribly concerning matter; where I was the victim of an awful curse. Potter was spying on me in the boys' bathroom where he cast the 'sectumsempra' curse. This near-fatal

Electricity!

This week in our Science lessons the children have been exploring electricity. We've been carrying out fair tests to explore if increasing voltage effects the brightness of a bulb!

Coming up!

Our next Topic is all about the human circulatory system and human diet!
