Key Info

The children will be in their new classes on Thursday and Friday next week.

Please continue to read with your children over the summer holidays

Thank you

We have come to the end of the year. The children have adapted so well to their new school and now they will be role models for the new Year 3 children. Thank you for your support- the teachers and staff work incredibly hard for your children and your support when things go wrong and right is appreciated.

Maths

In the last maths lessons we are making sure that children can use column addition and column subtraction. If you want, you could give the children a few questions to do over the summer so that they can impress their new teachers in September

English

We have come to our last English topic of the year. It has been great to see how far the children's writing has come this year. When you get their books - look at the first few pieces and the then compare with the last few and you'll see all the progress that has been made. Our last piece of English centres around a balanced argument on whether during the war the local parks should have been dug up and turned into vegetable patches.

Topic

The children are finishing their WW2 topic with some art work based on the work of Graham Sutherland. Graham Sutherland was a surrealist artist and was commissioned to be a war artist during the Second World War. He also painted a portrait of Churchill. The former Prime minister hated the painting and Churchill's wife destroyed it after his death. We are hoping the children's work will be appreciated and certainly not destroyed!
